

For Immediate Release

New Location

After locations on 57th Street and Soho, Luise Ross Gallery relocated this August for the third time in the past 23 years to Chelsea. The gallery will present an exhibition of recent work by gallery artists for the inaugural show.

New paintings by Willie Birch feature New Orleans musicians, and John Dilg plays with just the right juxtaposition of ironic elements while Thomas Lyon Mills continues his exploration of the catacombs in Rome. China Marks' new sewn drawings reflect the artist's ever-increasing expressive inventiveness and dexterity. New sculpture by Judith Page reveals the artist's personal, expanding lexicon of everyday surrealism, and a new mixed media painting by TL Solien delves into his series on Melville's Moby Dick.

Alongside the work of contemporary artists are pieces by the major self-taught artists of the gallery stable, including Minnie Evans and Bill Traylor.
